Bluetooth Pairing

Bluetooth pairing occurs when two Bluetooth devices agree to communicate with each other and establish a connection.

Connecting to other devices using Bluetooth® wireless technology

When connecting to any other device, please read its user guide for detailed safety instructions.

Before registering or "pairing" this unit with your Bluetooth device (cellular phone, for example), make sure the unit is turned on. Then press the Bluetooth button to access the Bluetooth setup. The screen will display the words "NO LINK" until a Bluetooth device is successfully paired with the EEDV03 . The unit sends a password message Bluetooth device that reads "Enter a numeric PassKey for Elite Entertainment". The factory default pass key is 0000 (four zeroes).

Next, enter the 4-digit passkey to establish the Bluetooth connection. The unit should then send a message to your device (such as your cell phone) asking you to confirm the connection. Go ahead and confirm the connection on that device and the device and the EEDV03 will be paired.

Pairing the EEDV03 to a cell phone will allow hands-free phone calls. Use the Mic (microphone) on the front of the EEDV03 to talk. Be aware that the phone conversation will be heard through all the speakers that are on, so people in other rooms may hear your conversation. You can turn off speakers in other rooms by using the A, B or C buttons.

You cannot transmit video through Bluetooth on this unit.

The paired Bluetooth connection allows you to stream stereo audio from the paired device (such as an iPhone) from as far away as 25 feet.

Once a device is paired with the unit, the Bluetooth device should connect automatically in the future.
